This study aims to determine parents' perceptions of the Free Nutritious Meal Program (Program Makan Bergizi Gratis/MBG) and to analyze the program from the perspective of Islamic economics in Blang Mee Village, Kutablang District, Bireuen Regency. This research employed a qualitative approach with a field research design. The informants consisted of 14 participants, including 10 parents as the main informants and 4 supporting informants, namely the village religious leader (Tgk. Imum), the Head of the Nutrition Fulfillment Service Unit (SPPG), a nutritionist, and the school principal. Data were collected through observation, interviews, and documentation. The data were analyzed using data reduction, data presentation, and conclusion drawing.The findings indicate that, in general, parents have positive perceptions of the Free Nutritious Meal Program (MBG). They believe that the program helps fulfill children's nutritional needs, encourages healthy eating habits, reduces household food expenses, and improves students' enthusiasm for learning. However, several informants suggested that greater attention should be given to menu variety, food hygiene, and food quality to maximize the program's benefits. From the perspective of Islamic economics, the Free Nutritious Meal Program (MBG) is considered to be in line with the principles of maslahah (public benefit), 'adl (justice), ta'awun (mutual assistance), and takaful (social solidarity). This finding is supported by interviews with the village religious leader and reinforced by statements from the Head of SPPG, the nutritionist, and the school principal, all of whom stated that the program has been implemented effectively and has provided significant benefits to students and the community.
